

Normal microphone construction takes "all" sounds from front

Differential microphone construction attenuates sounds from rear and side

Electrically both microphone capsules is identical or can be exactly same component in both construction